D2. Required Courses: (6 credit hours)

D2a. Major Core Courses: 2 courses; 6 credit hours

- LIN 3003 Language Matters (3)
- FOT 4131 Understanding World Cultures (3)

D3. Required Concentrations: (24 credit hours)

Students complete a World Languages and Cultures program of study and at least one concentration in: Applied Linguistics; Chinese Language and Culture; Classics; East Asian Languages and Cultures; French and Francophone Studies; German; Interdisciplinary Classical Civilizations; Italian; Russian; Spanish and Latin American Studies; or a combination of two concentrations (dual concentrations), completing 12 credit hours in one chosen concentration and 12 credit hours in the other chosen concentration. Prior to declaring a dual concentration, students should consult with the World Languages advisors and faculty to determine the best combination of coursework. Some dual concentrations may require additional credit hours to meet the minimum credit hours for the concentration.

D3a. Applied Linguistics Concentration:

The Applied Linguistics concentration will help students comprehend a broad range of language-related issues to better understand how language functions both in the lives of individuals and in society. The coursework in this concentration will prepare students for a wide range of career options, including pedagogical preparation for language teaching domestically or internationally, cross-cultural competency for careers in industry, and foundational knowledge in applied linguistics to be successful in graduate work in the field.

Prerequisite/Supporting Courses:

The following courses are prerequisite/supporting courses for this concentration. They are required for the concentration but are not counted in the total hours for this major but count toward general/unrestricted electives.

Completion of 11-12 credit hours of any foreign language through the intermediate level or demonstrated proficiency by testing.

Concentration Core: 6 credit hours

- TSL 4362 Methodology of Teaching English Overseas (3)

Of these six elective courses, one literature or culture course can be substituted (e.g. Russian Literature in Translation, Introduction to Chinese Culture).

D3b. Chinese Language and Culture: Concentration:

The Chinese Language and Culture concentration is designed for students who wish to achieve advanced level proficiency in modern Mandarin Chinese language at the same time they develop the sociocultural skills necessary for interaction with Chinese counterparts in professional contexts. Chinese is spoken by more than one billion people across the globe and has been designated a national Critical Language in the US government. High-level Chinese language skills equip students to be highly competitive for China-related jobs in government, international business, international law, education and the non-profit sector.

Prerequisite/Supporting Courses:

The following courses are prerequisite/supporting courses for this concentration. They are required for the concentration, but are not counted in the total hours for this major but count toward general/unrestricted electives. Students may also demonstrate proficiency by testing.

D3c. Classics Concentration:

The Classics concentration is an interdisciplinary humanities field. We provide instruction in the Greek and Latin languages and in the Greek and Roman civilization, literature, mythology and religion. Faculty offer courses in diverse aspects of the Greek and Roman world and mentor students in the acquisition of specific applied skills through their studies. The Classics section combines the intimacy of a small liberal arts college with the wide-ranging educational and professional possibilities of a large state university. This concentration is of special interest to students who wish to teach Latin and Greek at the pre-college level, and to those who plan graduate study in a humanistic discipline including law and medicine.

Prerequisite/Supporting Courses:

The following courses are prerequisite/supporting courses for this concentration. They are required for the concentration but are not counted in the total hours for this major but count toward general/unrestricted electives. Students may also demonstrate proficiency by testing.
